

Argentyn 23: Myth and Fact

By Frank A. Charles, ND

In 1992, according to Newsweek, 13,000 hospital patients died from drug resistant infections. A few years later this figure jumped to 70,000. Today over 2,000,000 million Americans suffer from hospital based anti-biotic resistant super germ infections.

In addition to this life threatening pandemic most of us face immune challenges at least three times a year if not on an ongoing basis with a chronic viral, bacterial, parasitic, allergic or fungal issue.

For centuries in the annals of all medical literature there has been the one anti-microbial and immune support wonder called silver. Before the advent of antibiotics and patent medicine silver was the broadest spectrum anti-microbial and not associated with drug resistance. It is once ready to take its rightful place in medicine again.

MYTH: Silver is silver is silver even if its home made

FACT: The market is flooded with opportunistic makers of poor silver and even poorer homemade silvers in the market that are not effective or in some cases safe.

It has taken me 4 years to research and understand that there is only one oligodynamic hydrosol picoscalar nano silver to trust.

MYTH: Silver is safe in plastic bottles

FACT: Silver leaches plastic and anyone who puts silver in plastic is a marketing opportunist with little regard for human health. We have studies to back this up.

MYTH: Silver is a heavy metal and causes one to turn gray or blue.

FACT: Poorly made silvers if taken in excess and large parts per million can cause argyria but will not harm you.

MYTH: Herbals, essential oils, and other products are just as effective at helping the immune system eradicate microbial challenges.

FACT: extremely well made (oligodynamic hydrosol picoscalar silver) when utilized and dosed correctly by a skilled practitioner has no equal in efficacy and quick high kill rates like silver.

MYTH: Silver is a heavy metal

FACT: Silver is actually a trace nutrient, based on receptor site findings in myelin sheathing and white blood cells, and has important immune modulating functions. Impure silvers attached to certain compounds (cheaply made silver) are not only much less effective but can be toxic. Much like manmade "natural" vitamins can induce vitaminosis or vitamin induced illness.
