

Homeopathy

The logical first choice for acne relief

Acne is a term that covers skin conditions involving various types of blemishes. Although considered "normal" for teens, acne can affect any age group, and nearly 85% of all people experience it at some point in their lives. Acne typically appears on the face, chest, and/or back.

Although acne is considered a minor health problem, it signals an imbalance in the body. Acne symptoms range from small, white pimples to large, boil-like cysts. Severe cases can leave permanent scars. Because acne is commonly experienced on the face, it often causes an insecurity that may negatively affect self-esteem. This can cause long-lasting effects that may leave deeper scars than just those on the skin.

How can homeopathy help?

Homeopathy has a long history based on the well-known Law of Similars: "like cures like." Homeopathy uses ultra-diluted and potentized substances from the plant, mineral, or animal kingdoms to help the body overcome health problems from within. It has been used safely and successfully worldwide, and now King Bio has taken the science to a new level: advanced, contemporary homeopathy.

Homeopathy's record of safety

During more than 200 years of clinical use, homeopathic medicines have had NO recorded side effects and NO negative interactions with other drugs, and were the first of all the natural remedies to be registered with the FDA as pharmaceutical products. King Bio offers a full line of homeopathic remedies that are powerful, physician-tested formulas, in a taste-free, pure water base.

Indications for use ▶ For the symptoms of acne: pimples, blackheads, oily skin, skin eruptions, unhealthy skin, teenage acne, adult acne, skin inflammation, uneven skin tone, and menstrual breakouts

What is acne?

Types of acne include pimples (that are either whiteheads or blackheads), papules (small, inflamed, infected, raised bumps that may be red and tender), pustules (tender, red, raised bumps with pus at their tips), nodules (large, solid, painful lumps below the surface of the skin), and cysts (painful, pus-filled, boil-like infections causing lumps beneath the skin's surface).

No matter the type, acne is often difficult to manage, and affects more than 40 – 50 million Americans, usually between the ages of 12 – 24. By the mid-teens, more than 40% of adolescents have acne or acne scarring. In 2004, the direct cost of conventional acne treatments was more than $2.2 billion, which does not include costs due to secondary treatment of side effects. Some suspected issues arising from the use of antibiotics and other prescribed acne medications include yeast infections, impaired digestion, the potential of severe birth defects, and an increased risk of depression and suicide.

What causes acne?

Normally, the skin produces sebum (oil) that moves up the hair follicle and keeps the skin soft and waterproof.

Old skin cells constantly slough off, and the normal skin bacteria, Propionibacterium acnes, feeds on the sebum. However, when hair follicles become clogged and sebum and dead skin cells build up in the follicle, P. acnes can cause inflammation. During major hormonal changes such as puberty, pregnancy, and menopause, this cycle is accelerated.

While conventional medical experts report the causes of acne stem solely from overproduction of sebum, irregular shedding of dead skin cells, the buildup of bacteria, and heredity factors, naturopathic practitioners have a different approach. Recognizing that there may be more to the picture, they evaluate and treat the whole person.

For example, stress may play a big role in acne flare-ups for some, signaling adrenal glands that need support. High-glycemic foods (easily converting to sugars) also seem to worsen acne for many by stimulating insulin spikes, which, in turn, trigger adrenal-induced hormone production. Naturopaths may also pinpoint food allergies that may stimulate or worsen acne.

Since the skin is the body's largest organ of detoxification (often called the "third kidney"), it only makes sense that what's happening on the inside is reflected on the skin. King Bio addresses potential underlying causes to help bring the body back into balance with Acne Clear™.

Dr. King suggests these potential complementary formulas*
